Winnie-the-Pooh, also called Pooh Bear, is a fictional anthropomorphic bear created by A. A. Milne as well as the title of a collection of stories and poems about the adventures of a teddy bear named Winnie-the-Pooh and his friends, who live in the Hundred Acre Wood. The stories center around Pooh, a bear of very little brain, and his friends Piglet, Eeyore, Kanga, Roo, Tigger, and Christopher Robin, who are all living in the Hundred Acre Wood. The first collection of stories was Winnie-the-Pooh (1926), followed by The House at Pooh Corner (1928). In the books, Pooh goes on adventures and has many mishaps, but always manages to find a way out of trouble with the help of his friends. One of the most famous stories is "Winnie-the-Pooh and the Honey Tree," in which Pooh gets his head stuck in a honey jar while trying to reach for some honey, and his friends must come up with a plan to get him out. Other well-known stories include "Winnie-the-Pooh and the Blustery Day," in which Pooh gets trapped by a huge pile of fallen leaves, and "Winnie-the-Pooh and Tigger Too," in which Tigger's bouncy behavior causes trouble for everyone in the forest. Winnie-the-Pooh is a classic children's book that teaches simple life lessons and values such as friendship, perseverance and the importance of helping others through a fun and engaging way.

Alan Alexander Milne (A. A. Milne) (January 18, 1882 – January 31, 1956) was an English author, best known for his books about the teddy bear Winnie-the-Pooh. He was born in Hartfield, Sussex, England and educated at Westminster School and Trinity College, Cambridge, where he graduated with a degree in mathematics. After graduation, Milne worked as a writer and editor for the humor magazine Punch. He also wrote plays, novels and poetry. Winnie-the-Pooh was published in 1926 and became an instant success and was soon followed by The House at Pooh Corner in 1928. The books were based on stories he had told his son Christopher Robin, and the characters were named after Christopher Robin's toys. His other children's books include When We Were Very Young, Now We Are Six and The Holiday Round. In addition, Milne wrote several successful plays, including Mr. Pim Passes By (1919) and The Dover Road (1921). He also wrote several adult novels, including The Red House Mystery (1922) and the autobiographical novel It's Too Late Now (1939). Milne's books have been enjoyed by generations of children and have been translated into many languages. The Winnie-the-Pooh stories have been adapted for the stage, film and television. He continues to be one of the most beloved children's authors worldwide.
